Marcia was a unique, beautiful, loving, HILARIOUS woman who I am proud to have called a friend. She always tried to include everyone & made even complete strangers feel like they were part of the group. Her advice through the breakup of my marriage & other problems I have faced helped me to become a stronger person. She was an independent, HAPPY woman who I looked up to. I will miss her face at poker games and during the holiday get togethers we always had. Lol I can just see her right now, trying to get together a poker game in heaven. Love you Marcia. You are missed.

Marcia had a very strong personality that left an impression on everyone she met. Everything she did, she poured her heart into. She loved deeply. She cared strongly. She was giving. She was genuine. The world won't be as bright a place without her in it.

I care about Ashley as a friend and respect her as a person and colleague. I look up to Ashley because of her intelligence, self-respect, and sharp sense of humor. It's obvious from Ashley's stories that Marcia is largely responsible for the admirable and likable person Ashley has become. Marcia seemed like the kind of woman who was fearless and eager to explore the world and enjoy all life had to offer. Ashley has inherited similar qualities that make her a lovely person to be around and a truly irreplaceable friend. I send all my love and condolences to Ashley, Josh, and all of Marcia's friends and family.

Marcia was a generous, kind, and truly authentic person. I will never forget her. She loved very completely and earnestly and she was passionate about living her life. I will think of her fondly, especially around Christmas, when she really seemed to shine. So much love to Ashley and Josh and to everyone who knew her. She will be remembered and missed forever. Her passing was too soon.

Marcia was my mother in law. I've known her for over half of my life. She was so warm and sweet to everyone. She often told me that I was the best son in law she could ever ask for. I appreciate and love her more than words could ever express.
