I'm Chloe's half sister -crystal is my mother. It's been about 10 years since alex has passed away. today is her birthday February 14. I remember when I was young on her birthday grams (crystal's mom) had bought her a barby set. I remember being so jealous because I wanted one to. But then I rembered everything she did for us. And I thought to myself "she deserves this". Ever since she was young she took care of me and my sister and brother as if we were her children. Always claming she wanted to be a mother when she grew up. I hope wherever she is that wish became true. She deserves happiness. Rest in peace chloebug.

Alex was in my third grade class this last year. She was a very sweet and loving little girl. She never missed a chance to say hi and speak to me every time she saw me. She always kept me on my toes and made sure I knew where she needed to be at all times. She loved wearing her white sandals almost every day and liked to dress up. I am so terribly sad that she is gone and I will miss seeing her bright and shining smile when school starts. Heaven has gained another angel. Love you Alex.

I am so sorry to hear of Alex passing.She was a delightful, optimistic girl at church on Wednesday evenings who loved to pray for others, read the Scriptures and learn about God working in the lives of those who sincerely seek and trust Him.I have missed the cheerful sunny smiling girl who was always so eager to help others and show kindness since she left Mounds.My prayers are with the family who loved her. I pray that God of all hope and comfort will comfort you.

Alex worked in my classroom (Post Office) during PSS for the past two weeks. While I hadn't known her long — she was an extremely sweet, helpful little girl. She will be terribly missed.
