Although I never knew you well, I know what your father is going through. As I too have lost my only child, my son, at about the same age. The similarities are striking. Your father is feeling guilty, shame, pride, love, and so many more conflicting emotions all at the same time. Your loss will be felt in the hearts of your survivors.

Thank you to everyone offering their condolences at this time. No one should have to endure the pain of loosing their only child. I wouldn't wish this on anyone. It's worse than Hell could ever be. My son, though we had our differences, we were more alike than either of us would admit. I wear your ring now and for the rest of my life then will give it to Trey. I love you son, more than you ever knew. I hope you know now. Your loving father.
