

Jeffrey McCabe

October 11, 1961 - July 14, 2020

Jeffrey Scott McCabe, 58, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, died on Tuesday, July 14, 2020 at his residence. He was born Oct. 11, 1961 in Wichita, Kansas to Billie Joe and Frances Lucille West McCabe.

Jeff spent the last nineteen years working for IBM as a System Service Representative, most recently in Tulsa, serving as the primary SSR in the Tulsa area. Jeff's willingness to travel to locations where he was needed most was exemplified by his frequent temporary assignments over the last year assisting with major projects in Colorado Springs and Denver.

Jeff will be remembered for his dry sense of humor, his big heart, his love of road trips and quirky tourist attractions, and his witty social media commentary on human behavior, pop culture, sports, and politics. He loved his cat, his friends, and his nieces and nephew, though if they beat him at cards he accused them of cheating. He enjoyed camping, motorcycling, shooting, and reading. His friends knew him as a walking encyclopedia and a Wichita State University fan who loved to watch the Shockers from the nearest sports bar no matter what city he was working in.

Jeff is survived by his two siblings, Nancy McCabe of Bradford, Pennsylvania and Bob McCabe of Wichita, Kansas; three nieces and a nephew, Sidney and Treven McCabe of Wichita, Kansas, Megan McCabe of Reno, Nevada, and Sophie McCabe of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

He was preceded in death by his parents.

“ I attend junior high with Jeff, and although we weren't close he was always a friendly guy. We reconnected in 2009 and stayed in touch on FB. His many stories of his travels were always a fun read. You will be missed, Jeff.

“ McCabe (as I called him) was quite a guy. He had a quick wit and was a walking encyclopedia. McCabe stayed frequently at my house, I even gave him a key as he was here normally on at least a monthly basis. Facebook will not be quite the same without his frequent, sometimes off the wall posts. McCabe was a kind and gentle man and lived life his way. RIP McCabe, you are already missed.

“ Jeff had such a wonderful dry, quick wit and was so so smart. I remember often getting called out for laughing in English class because he said something, very quietly of course, that made me crack up....of course the teacher didn't hear him, just my loud laughter! It was so wonderful to reconnect at the SE reunions, and through FB over the last 11 years. After he recovered from his heart surgery a few years ago, he took a road trip to visit friends, and KC was one of his stops. We enjoyed catching up over lunch here in KC. I already miss his witty, yet always intelligent posts on FB. Praying for you, Nancy and Bob, and all your extended family, that you may know God's comfort as you miss and remember your wonderful brother.

“ Thinking and Praying for all of you during this difficult time. He was always had such a special selfless gift of thinking of others before himself.
