“ Hi Mom. It's been a little over a year and I just thought I that would update you on a couple of things. You probably already know, but Dick and Freida are now in heaven with you and Dad. Hopefully you guys have all met up and are having a great reunion. Carolyn and I went through your paintings today. The ones we didn't keep we gave to Kelly. She was very appreciative. I also found the first painting you did of the little astronaut boy. I sure enjoyed seeing your signature at the bottom of the painting. I can still tell your handwriting. I still miss you so much. We are all doing fine here. Alexis will be getting married this year to a real fine gentleman. I'm very happy for her as I'm sure you would be. Audra is doing well also. She will be graduating this year and already has a job lined up. I'm so proud of both the girls. I'm sure you would be too. Well, I'll be back next year to give your more updates. I love you Mom. Thanks for everything you did for me while I grew up.

“ Mom, It's been seven years since you started living in heaven. I told you just before you died that I would take care of Dad for you. Well, I kept my word. For his last two years, I was his guardian here on earth. I'm sure by now, that you two are doing the tango again. I'm still keeping in touch with Kelly. She is doing well. I really miss you. You know, when you can see people with your eyes, or hear their voices, we tend to take our time together for granted. But once all of that is taken away, you really can't cherish the memories quite enough. I just wanted you to know that I think of you often. I know I didn't really cry at your funeral, but the hurt I feel now, just grows stronger every year you're not here. I will send you another note next year. I love you....Phil

“ Some people today thing that paint-is-paint-is-paint and off they go, but in rateily it genuinely isn't like that at all. For a begin deciding upon the wrong paint or even a poor paint can put all the tough work that you did in painting your bathroom to ruin. Also it's a fairly fantastic method to go about wasting funds which you decided to invest into your bathroom. So you should be sure that the paint you pick out stands up to the hot,cold,damp and dry that a bathroom can throw at it, all of the although searching excellent too!
