“ I don't think anyone could love me more than Ron did. It was heartbreaking to watch the man I've loved so long I can't remember not loving him get weaker with every passing day. So many times each day he would hold my hand and tell me how much he loved me & that he thought I was the best person he'd ever known (he was a bit biased, lol), His words were uplifting to me especially because he was thinking about my well being over himself. I've always known that Ron was a strong person, but watching him go through the pain, anger and fear of this horrible disease that was ravaging his former muscular body, his strength in my eyes grew exponentially. It was a spiritual strength that touched anyone that came in contact with him. His love for Our Lord & Savior Jesus was so powerful and inspirational. I know the only way I will survive losing him is knowing that God will be guiding me and Ron's love is all around me, like a warm loving hug. I will always love you Ron, my beautiful husband and best friend. I look forward to the day I can hold your hand again. Mwah
