“ Mommy, I miss you more and more every day. I hope that your soul is forever at peace. Even though it's been two and a half years since you've been gone, I will never forget your smile. I graduate from college this next May and wish more than anything that you could be there. But even though you're gone, thank you for appearing in my dreams, your face brings me so much joy and confidence. Love you forever.

“ I was so sorry to hear of Sara's passing. I worked with her at Unit and she was always a lovely person and when she and Mike would come to the events we'd have a great time talking. She was a such a bright light and so friendly; like a favorite cousin you can't wait to see again even if it's been years. We always had fun talking about cooking too. I would get olive oil shipped over from Italy about every other year and send her some. I'm sorry for all your family and your friends; you have lost a beautiful person, but I know God will bring peace to you in time. And I want you to know; those who knew her like I did, she brought sunshine, joy, and laughter to our lives and that's how we will forever remember her. My prayers for peace and love for all her family and friends. Chris Ellis
